“ My grandad was a quiet man, took his work seriously, and was exceptional at the small details. But my favorite thing about him was his grin, his sense of humor. Up until the very last time I saw him, he still cracked a grin, and a subtle chuckle.

I have so many good memories. Riding the truck to do chores, going into town for a burger, hiding from him after ruining his hay bales from jumping on them! But my favorite memory has to be the first time he held my baby. I loved seeing his eyes light up and a huge smile across his face holding his great grandson. He was quiet and tough, but grandad still had a soft side.

I love and miss you. I am grateful for the memories. I am grateful my kids will remember you. And I am grateful you are home and that I will see you again.
