“ The first time I met Jim was following a traumatic head on accident involving my own family. His daughter Kathy, and husband Bob had been assisting me with all the follow up appointments and surgical repair of my broken jaw. My wife lied in a coma in the hospital. Jim's beloved wife fell ill and had to be hospitalized. I went to visit her in the hospital to, in part, repay the kindness Kathy and Bob had shown me. That visit did so much for me beyond that I can hardly express. Jim shared his fears of being without his beloved and shared his tears with me. That made my own fears about my wife's condition and my fear of loosing her come to the fore. Jim and I shared a good cry together and left feeling like it was going to be okay. Ultimately it was for both our wives. When Jim's wife passed, I knew and understood how difficult it would be to go on, but he did with courage and daily trial. Find peace my friend you touched my life at a time I needed it most.
