“ I don't think I can remember not knowing Lloyd. I've literally known him all my life. We grew up a few miles apart. We played together. We fought together. And we built lives. As the years drove on.....our lives took us in different directions. But, one thing is certain.....he was and always will be.....my friend. He always had a big smile, a big hug, and a crushing handshake whenever I saw him. I will miss you, my friend. Save me a spot under a big shade tree up there in heaven.

“ Ivan, Naydene and family, so very sorry for your loss. Lloyd was one of the first people we met when we moved to Carthage in 2002. He was a friend for all these years and his smile and vibrant personality will be missed. Keeping you in our thoughts and prayers. Ed and Michelle Williamson

“ I have fought the good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith. 2 Timothy 4:7

Lloyd is just one of those guys no one could help but like, I will forever remember him for his wit, orneriness, big smile and dimples. I am sure heaven is having a great time celebrating his homecoming.

Keeping all family in my prayers as I know it does not feel like a celebration at this moment. So sorry for your broken hearts. ~❤️

“ I think Lloyd and I had a long-standing tradition of trying to prove who had the harder head by jumping off of things of varying heights. In childhood it was porches, then stacks of hay bales in the barn (maybe a few haylofts.) Whoever didn't need medical attention afterwards was the winner. Lots of fun times were had whenever we came to visit. Many jokes were pulled, mainly at my expense (me being the city-slicker.) lol I remember Lloyd squirting me with milk while we were milking the cow, and laughing when I was surprised that it was hot.” You think it comes refrigerated?” Was what he said to me. Riding horses, helping bail hay, chasing cows in the fields, all good memories for a city kid with the country cousins. After all he went through lately, I can safely say, ” You win, Lloyd!”
