“ I remember meeting Taylor and his then girlfriend at an art festival 9 years ago. That quickly led to a friendship, because he was so kind and gracious. We had many a bonfire, potluck dinner, sunset watching hangouts, with Taylor's guitar creating a beautiful soundtrack. We drifted apart as we both separated from our partners, and when I moved away. I always thought that we would meet up though sometime when I was back in town and have a couple beers and catch up. I'm so sorry we never did. I love this picture I took of him. He's got a frisbee on his head, and I told him he looked like Saint Kurt Cobain.

“ I have so many great times and stories with Taylor.. where to begin. We first met in high school art class and then later began a relationship that lasted over five years. We had our first place together, grew up (a little) and just had a lot fun going on adventures, enjoying nature, art, music and sky watching together. He has made an impressionable impact in my life. Memories that I'll hold and cherish in my heart forever. Although it saddens me to know he no longer walks the Earth, his spirit is eternal and that gives me great comfort to know he'll always be with me and continue to guide me to love and light.

“ When I worked at the Woodshed, Taylor would come in every once in a while to have a drink and watch the live performers. I once asked him what he'd do when he made it big. After he tried to tell me he never would because he wasn't that good, he finally said he'd go straight to Belize. Even though he didn't make it there, I know he's enjoying an even better paradise. I'll miss your smile and hugs Taylor-tot.
